Davis, Bowen & Friedel, Inc. (DBF), recently welcomed Bruce Carchidi, AIA, LEED AP, to their Salisbury office. A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, he brings more than twenty-seven years of experience in commercial and residential architecture to the firm.

His work has taken him throughout Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maine, Vermont, Washington DC, and New Zealand.

Carchidi's position at DBF will be that of a lead architect and project manager, and will include the documentation and development of architectural design, permit drawings for commercial and residential projects, renderings and drawings of existing properties, coordination with the work of other disciplines, detailing to enhance aesthetic and technical requirements, consultations for renovation or remodeling, sustainable design, and integration with landscape and stormwater reduction.

"With Bruce's background and experience, our architectural division has the capability to bolster our resources and offer our clientele expanded professional services. We very much look forward to having Bruce as part of our team," shared DBF principal Michael Wigley, AIA.
